Medicaid and CHIP Renewals: Returning to Regular Operations

States across the country are resuming their regular processes for renewing individuals' Medicaid and Children's Health Insurance Program (CHIP) coverage. As this happens, our goal is to help people who are still eligible for Medicaid and CHIP to keep their coverage and help those who are no longer eligible transition to Medicare, employer-sponsored coverage, or Marketplace plans.

Data from Medicaid and CHIP renewals show how states are resuming regular eligibility operations following the end of the Medicaid continuous enrollment condition authorized by the Families First Coronavirus Response Act. The Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2023 (CAA, 2023) requires state monthly reporting about activities related to eligibility renewals, call center operations, and transitions to Marketplace coverage, from April 1, 2023, through June 30, 2024. CMS is also providing information such as changes in Medicaid, CHIP and Marketplace enrollment; state operational data; and additional renewal metrics.

Historical Health Coverage Changes

The Medicaid and CHIP programs provided essential health coverage to millions of people during the COVID-19 public health emergency.

The data below show where people in the U.S. got their health coverage before the Medicaid continuous enrollment condition took effect and before it ended. A significant share of these individuals is counted in more than one category — for example, in February 2023, more than 12 million people had both Medicaid and Medicare coverage, and in 2021, 15% of Medicaid enrollees ages 19-64 also had employer-sponsored coverage (where Medicaid is the payer of last resort).[1]

Data will be updated as it becomes available. For some data sources, there is a lag of several months.

Monthly Data Reports

These reports show how states are resuming regular eligibility operations following the end of the Medicaid continuous enrollment condition authorized by the Families First Coronavirus Response Act. The Consolidated Appropriations Act, 2023 (CAA, 2023) requires state monthly reporting about activities related to eligibility renewals, call center operations and transitions to Marketplace coverage, from April 1, 2023, through June 30, 2024. CMS is also providing information such as changes in Medicaid, CHIP and Marketplace enrollment; state operational data; and additional renewal metrics.

The monthly reports contain state-level Medicaid, CHIP and Marketplace metrics. CMS will consolidate data from multiple data sources. Given differences in availability of data across data sources, CMS will release each month's data in two releases. The first release will reflect renewal outcomes, call center operations, and initial transitions to Marketplace coverage. The second release will focus on transitions of coverage for people who left Medicaid or CHIP in HealthCare.gov states and will follow two months after the initial release.
